There's little cause to invoke the saddest words in the English language, "It might have been." for those of us living in the United States, where the need to learn is matched with the opportunity to learn and endless need to apply that knowledge. Each of us is free to apply and expand the talents which God has given us and expects us to manage as faithful servants.

I learned to live by my own Christian ethical standards, answering only to my own conscience and not going along with group standards or conduct when they were in conflict with what I knew in my heart was right and proper. It's often quite difficult to do what you know is absolutely honest and right in business today. But with God's guidance. I'll try.

The reward is in the work about to be undertaken, not in the one just finished. Aside from talent, the most useful qualities are patience, curiosity, sympathy, respect both for fact and privacy intuition, mental toughness, and a healthy awareness that patters words on paper for publication is incomparably an act of the ego
